ENSURING SAFETY AND CALM

Einav, strategically located on a hilltop in western Samaria, is surrounded on all sides by hostile Arab villages. Despite the difficult security situation, Einav's Religious Zionist founders were committed to resettling the land of their forefathers, in fulfillment of Biblical prophecy. Forty years later, Einav is a thriving community, exuding love and devotion to Biblical values and the Holy Land. Unfortunately, the people of Einav continue to live under constant terrorist threat, as local Arabs are still bent on uprooting a Jewish presence in the area.

Last year, three terrorists threw Molotov cocktails at soldiers stationed just outside Einav. The army responded in full force, and residents heard gunfire echoing in the area. Since Einav does not have an emergency center, where they can communicate with other security teams and provide real-time updates to residents, local families heard the harrowing sounds of battle for over an hour, not knowing whether their lives were in imminent danger. They were terrified! Another time, terrorists set fire to surrounding fields. The fire spread fast through the dry vegetation, and both local and more distant firefighting crews were dispatched. The people of Einav heard sirens approaching, but did not know what was going on. Eventually, they were told to evacuate, but the stress of the unknown took its toll on the residents. Thankfully, no lives or property were hurt that day. But without an emergency center, the lives of local volunteers were endangered and panic festered.

Power failures occur frequently in rural Israel, especially during the winter months. Without backup systems, repair crews must be present at the scene to restore power. In Samaria, an area heavily populated by hostile Arabs, repair crews often have to wait for police or IDF protection, prolonging the blackout period. But worse yet, in Einav, every time the power goes out, lives are at risk. Einav recently installed a surveillance system, to alert its rapid response team to hostile attacks, thanks to the generous support of CFOIC Heartland donors. But Einav does not have an emergency generator, without which, the surveillance cameras do not function during blackouts, endangering the life of every resident in Einav.

Einav desperately needs an emergency generator and an emergency center, to help them manage emergencies more efficiently. Einav's resilient pioneers are particularly vulnerable to frequent terrorist attacks, especially during blackouts. By supporting this vital emergency project, you will partner with the people of Einav, providing them with greater protection during emergencies, as they continue to settle and grow in the Biblical Heartland.

COMMUNITY SNAPSHOT

- ✧ Founded: 1981
- ✧ Location: Samaria
- ✧ Origin of Name: Einav is Hebrew for grape and refers to the vineyards that were prominent in Samaria in Biblical times. Similar to the name of a nearby Arab village, Anabta, that may reflect an ancient Jewish village of a similar name
- ✧ Population: 215 families

Einav experiences frequent terrorist attacks, including arson, threatening lives and property

Your donation will provide Einav's families extra protection and security during emergency events
